Food fight.

New council bill attempts to bring order to Wild West of NYC food trucks.

New York's food trucks offer up an amazing variety, from waffles and cupcakes to schnitzel and Korean tacos.

But as their numbers have expanded, complaints have started coming in from businesses and residents.

"Food trucks have become popular in many corners of the city, but most of them are operating illegally," City Councilman Dan Garodnick told Metro.

In an attempt to resolve the free-for-all, including instances such as vending from metered spots or not following parking laws, Garodnick introduced a bill that would create special parking spots for food trucks. No more than one truck would be allowed per block, and half of the spots would be outside Manhattan.

The bill set the maximum number of food truck spots at 450.

"I am certain the bill will be revised to increase the number of spaces," said David Weber, president of the NYC Food Truck Association.

Other stakeholders believe something must be done, but disagree on specifics.

The mayor's office made a number of suggestions, including that food trucks bid for the right to certain street locations, that they switch to cleaner fuels and that they be responsible for the cleanliness of their immediate vicinity.

Quinn wants hate crime witnesses

Quinn wants witnesses to come forward. / WILLIAM ALATRISTE

Christine Quinn stood with hate crime survivors, community members and other elected officials at Madison Square Garden yesterday to call for witnesses to last week's alleged hate crime to come forward.

Last week, a group of men in Midtown Manhattan attacked two men, shouting anti-gay slurs at them and physically assaulting them.

The NYPD released video footage of eight men wanted for questioning and asked the public to come forward with any information on the incident.

The suspects verbally harassed two men, 22 and 28, as they were walking southbound on Eighth Avenue near 34th Street.

The suspects got closer to the victims and pushed them to the ground, cops said. The suspects punched one victim in the face, causing him to suffer a broken nose.

The other victim had bruising on his right hand.

The victims were treated and released from Bellevue Hospital.

The incident was the third reported hate crime in Manhattan last week.

City Council Speaker Christine Quinn outlined legislation that will bump the maximum price of news-

New items that might be added to the city's 300 newsstands? Chargers, umbrellas and earphones, Quinn suggested.

The Council last increased the price at newsstands from $2 to $5 in 2001. ALISON BOWEN

Airbnb users face some legal tangles

Crash pad. The popular site has hired lobbyists to change a law that could spell trouble for N.Y. hosts.

If you have listed your apartment on Airbnb, you might want to review the state's "multiple dwellings" law: It turns out that a good number of listings are illegal in New York.

According to a report in Crain's, about 30,000 New Yorkers are signed up as hosts.

A state law enacted in 2011 is prompting trouble for those hosts. The law was meant to prevent developers from buying up buildings zoned as residential and then running them as hotels without adhering to the regulations that apply to hotels. But now it could be getting in the way of short-term sublets by tenants, like those on Airbnb.

Lobbyists are working in Albany now on behalf of Airbnb to change that law to make it more amenable.

A spokesperson for Airbnb said that "87 percent of Airbnb hosts in New York list a home they live in" — and not as an illegal hotel.

Airbnb's defense

Airbnb and its proponents argue that the law doesn't apply to people who are sharing their homes, as opposed to renting out their apartment while they're not there.

A spokesperson for

Airbnb said: "They are average New Yorkers trying to pay their monthly bills and we are working with leaders in New York towards a more consistent, fair and progressive set of laws that will allow the community of travelers and hosts who rely on Airbnb to continue to flourish."

MTA 'green' card rakes in big cash

The $1 fee imposed by the MTA to encourage subway riders to reuse their MetroCards is producing an unexpected amount of extra revenue for the transit agency.

The so-called "green" MetroCard was supposed to reduce the number of used MetroCards that end up in the garbage, but a transit executive said recently that more transit riders are paying the $1 fee for a new card than was initially expected. The New York Daily News reports.

If the fee continues to produce as much extra cash for the MTA, the agency will exceed the $20 million in new revenues and savings that it anticipated when it first drafted the budget, the executive said.

The $1 surcharge, imposed in March, was expected to generate an estimated $18 million in revenue this year. Printing fewer cards and reducing cleanup costs was expected to save an additional $2 million for Underground. Man punches subway rider on 7 train to Queens

Police are searching for a man who sucker punched an unidentified victim on a Queens-bound 7 train last week.

The suspect punched the passenger about 1 a.m. on May 5 before exiting the train at the 69th Street station, cops said. The man is caught on video as he stands in the middle of the car and swings his arm to punch his victim, who is sitting down.

A witness recorded the assault on a cell phone and shared it with the Central Robbery Queens Transit Squad. The victim of the assault did not report the crime. Police are asking for the public's help in identifying the suspect and locating the victim.

The suspect is described as a white or Hispanic male, about 5-foot-9, 180 pounds, with brown eyes and long black hair worn in a ponytail. He was last seen wearing a dark T-shirt and blue jeans.

Anyone with information is asked to call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-577-TIPS (8477).

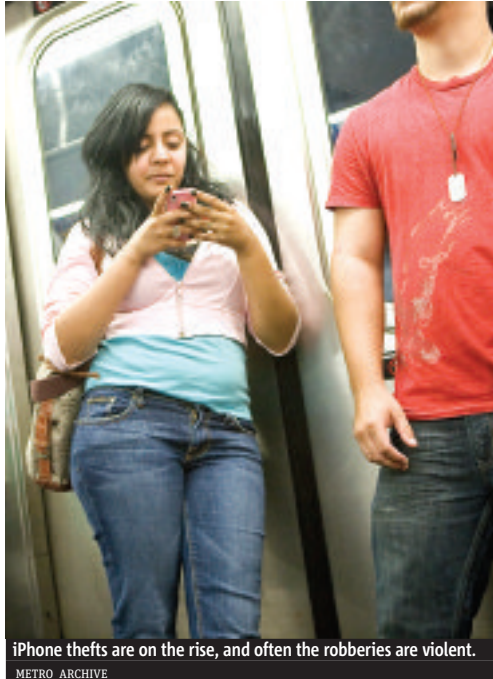

The public can also submit tips by texting 274637 (CRIMES) and entering TIP577.

Schneiderman wants to curb 'Apple picking' iPhone thefts are on the rise, and often the robberies are violent.

METRO ARCHIVE

Hot crime. Phone makers should stem iPhone theft, the state attorney general said.

New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman sent letters to the heads of Apple, Google, Microsoft and Samsung asking them to help prevent theft and questioning why phones aren't better protected from being resold on the black market.

He cited a rise in violent street crimes including phone thefts, often called "Apple picking."

He asked why the tech companies "cannot also create technology to render stolen devices inoperable and thereby eliminate the expanding black market."

According to Schneider-man's office, between January and September of last year, 11,447 smartphones were reported swiped, an increase of 3,280 from the year before.

This month, a woman was mugged at gunpoint in Crown Heights for her Android phone. In February, three people were stabbed on a Queens subway platform in a fight over the phone, and last April, a chef, 26, was killed for his phone in the Bronx.

IRS kept shifting targets in tax-exempt groups scrutiny

Findings. IRS agents changed their criteria while sifting through applications from groups seeking tax-exempt status to select ones for possible closer examination.

When tax agents started singling out nonprofit groups for extra scrutiny in 2010, they looked at first only for key words such as "Tea Party," but later they focused on criticisms by groups of "how the country is being run," according to investigative findings reviewed by Reuters.

At one point, the agents chose to screen applications from groups focused on making "America a better place to live."

applying extra scrutiny was not clear from the findings, which were contained in portions of an investigative report from the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA).

Expected to be made public this week, the report was obtained in part by Reuters over the weekend as a full-blown scandal involving the IRS scrutiny widened, embarrassing the agency and distracting the Obama administration.

In one part of the report, TIGTA officials observed that the application screening effort showed "confusion about how to process the applications, delays in the processing of the applications, and a lack of management oversight and guidance." REUTERS

New Orleans. Police release photos of shooting suspect

New Orleans police yesterday released photos that they said show a suspect wanted in the shooting at a Mother's Day parade in which 19 people, including two children, were wounded.

The image singling out the suspect does not clearly show the face, and police, who released the photographs on YouTube, asked for the public's help in identifying and finding the person.

Ten men, seven women and a girl and a boy, both

10 years old, were hit when one or more people opened fire at the parade Sunday. Police had earlier said they were looking for three suspects, adding that a motive for the shooting was unknown.

The photographs first show crowds of people in a street, and then the crowd is seen scattering and ducking. The final image focuses on what appears to be a man in a white shirt leaving the scene.

Abortion doctor guilty on three murder charges

Verdict. Gosnell faces the death penalty after being charged with murder of three newborn babies.

Gosnell, 72, faces the possibility of the death penalty.

He was accused of delivering live babies during late-term abortions and then deliberately severing their spinal cords.

The jury heard five weeks of testimony in Common Pleas Court in Philadelphia and deliberated for 10 days.

Gosnell also was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the case of Karnamaya Mongar, 41, of Virginia, who died from a drug overdose after going to him for an abortion.

He also was found guilty of performing 21 abortions after 24 weeks of pregnancy at his clinic, which served mostly low-income women in a largely black community. It is legal in Pennsylvania to abort a fetus only up to 24 weeks into a pregnancy.

Eight other defendants have pleaded guilty to a variety of charges and are awaiting sentencing. REUTERS

Is something you ate bugging you?

Chew on this.

Restaurants in Europe are starting to put insects on the menu amid reports that eating bugs can help fight obesity.

The thought of eating beetles, caterpillars and ants may give you the creeps, but the authors of a U.N. report published yesterday said the health benefits of consuming nutritious insects could help fight obesity.

More than 1,900 species of insects are eaten around the world, mainly in Africa and Asia, but people in the West generally turn their noses up at the likes of grasshoppers, termites and other crunchy fare.

The authors of the study by the Forestry Department, part of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO), said many insects contained the same amount of protein and minerals as meat and more healthy fats doctors recommend in balanced diets.

"In the West we have a cultural bias, and think that because insects come from developing countries, they cannot be good," said scientist Arnold van Huis from Wageningen University in the Netherlands, one of the authors of the report.

Eva Muller of the FAO said restaurants in Europe were starting to offer insect-based dishes, presenting them to diners as exotic delicacies. REUTERS

Not an acquired taste

Van Huis said barriers to enjoying dishes such as bee larvae yogurt were psychological — in a blind test by his team, nine out of 10 people preferred meatballs made from roughly half meat and half mealworms to those made from meat.

Bangladesh. H&M, others, agree to factory standards

The world's two biggest fashion retailers Inditex and H&M have backed an accord aimed at preventing a repeat of last month's collapse of a Bangladesh factory building that killed more than 1,100 people.

The agreement on fire and building safety, which is being driven by the International Labour Organization, trade unions and other lobby groups, has been under negotiation since the factory collapsed on April 24.

A series of deadly incidents at factories, including a fire in November that killed 112 people, has focused global attention on safety standards in Bangladesh's booming garment industry, the world's biggest exporter of clothing after China. REUTERS

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Russell Brand is a cat person, Marlon Wayans is a big fan of himself, Niall Horan is a wee bit tired and Whitney Cummings is concerned about what's happening to society.

@rustyrocks: Uncomplicated relationship with narcissistic freeloader who's scratching himself on my belly

@MARLONWAYANS: I have a lot of fun chilling with ME. I'm a lot of fun. Some people need company... I just need me. #iloveyoume @NiallOfficial: how am i still awake? my eyes are rollin !! ahahaha..

@WhitneyCummings: You guys, "selfie" is a word now that we just use like its okay or something Blue Ivy 2.0: Is Beyonce pregnant?

Everyone! Listen up! The New York Post is citing multiple sources that claim Beyonce and her husband Jay-Z are expecting their second child. And their reps are not responding to calls.

But here's why this is dubious: Beyonce is in the middle of a giant world tour. Millions and millions are on the line. "The Mrs. Carter Show World Tour" ends Aug. 5 in Brooklyn. People worship at the altar of B — but people shell out major bucks for tickets to see Beyonce doing her thing and getting all Sasha Fierce onstage, not a pregnant Beyonce having to sit in a chair to perform. (That is the exact opposite of Sasha Fierce; that is Sasha Con-valescence.)

But, of course, she will probably strut through it — bump and all. Because if we haven't figured it out by now, Beyonce exists to make the rest of us feel terrible about

Rob Lowe celebrates 23 years sober

Rob Lowe is marking quite the occasion, and he doesn't mind sharing it. "Celebrating 23 years sober tonight," the "Parks and Recreation" star posted to Twitter recently. Lowe quit drinking after entering rehab in 1990, which he described in his 2011 memoir as "one of the most exhilarating, liberating and exciting four weeks of my life."

Honestly, his face is the best reason in the world to stop drinking. I want a "Faces of Rob Lowe" slideshow I can watch when I feel like I need a drink. Which, readers, is often.

Q&A

On the Cumberbatch

Benedict Cumberbatch's character is really creepy. How do you deal with bad guys like him in real life?

You come across people like that on a Saturday night, drunk and in the mood for a fight. You can see that longing for violence.

Have you ever picked up on it?

I tend not to go out. But it's a testament to Benedict's acting in that he's possibly one of the sweetest people. I did see him get carb rage once. He was working out for a shower scene that didn't end up in the movie — a lot of girls will be disappointed — and he'd had no carbohydrates for two days. That's as close as he gets to showing any kind of madness — carb rage.

SIMON PEGG

The "Shaun of the Dead" star talks about being in not terrible shape — just terrible compared to Chris Pine.

SCOTTY RIDES AGAIN

It's hard to think of a geek who's had better luck than Simon Pegg. In his career, he's impressed one of his favorite filmmakers, George A. Romero, with "Shaun of the Dead." And he's become Scotty, chief engineer aboard the starship Enterprise, in J.J. Abrams' much-loved reboot of the "Star Trek" franchise whose sequel, "Star Trek Into Darkness," comes out Wednesday. As a cherry on top, Abrams is about to tackle the "Star Wars" sequels, although Pegg isn't harassing his boss for spoilers.

There's a new 'Star Wars' film coming, obviously, from 'Into Darkness' director J.J. Abrams. What's your strategy to get J.J. to tell you something about it?
I don't need a strategy. If J.J. wants to tell you something he will, and if he doesn't it's because he wants to keep things close to his chest.

So you didn't get him drunk or anything?
I respect him too much for that. I'm very happy to be kept in the dark because I haven't seen a good "Star Wars" film since "Return of the Jedi."

In 'Into Darkness,' there's a scene where the ship is going all over the place and you and Chris Pine are jumping around and hanging off railings. Is that look on your face genuine terror?

It was more pain. I had to hang from Chris' hand and the harness could only go from my one hip, so I was slightly skewed. But no, it was all acting. My 3-year-old daughter was on set that day and she assumed that's what my job was: hanging. She was like, "Are you going to hang today, daddy?"

Scotty doesn't manage to hold onto the bar and is saved by a much stronger Captain Kirk. Ever been like, 'Man, I really wish I had Chris' body?'
You should feel his arms. They're like oak. We'd go to the gym together and it was amazing how the female contingent would start gravitating towards him. Nobody paid me any attention. But no, I was pretty buff at the time!

You and Nick Frost have appeared in 'Shaun of the Dead,' 'Hot Fuzz' and other films together. If you could, what part would you give him in 'Star Trek?'

I'd love him to play Harry Mudd from the original '66 series. But I wouldn't necessarily want him to be in it and I don't think he would want to either. It's not like we have to come as a package.

You don't have a love interest in this movie....
What about my little guy? That's my love interest. The little fellow. We're a unit. We're married.

Your little alien assistant? But you don't even get to kiss it.
I don't kiss it.

It would be hard to.
He needs a bit of moisturizing. His face is a little rocky.

But if you could, who would you share a kiss with, Alice Eve or Zoe Saldana?
That's not a choice any man could make. They're both as gorgeous as each other. They come in and everyone is just like, "WOW!"

Have you met everyone in Hollywood that you've wanted to meet, as a fan?
I don't think you could ever meet everybody. L.A. is like one of those safari parks where you can walk amongst the animals. You see, like, Jeff Goldblum in the supermarket.

Killing them softly

Interview. Ben Wheatley, director of "Sightseers," wants to make you happy (this time).

Chances are if you've heard the name Ben Wheatley, it's because he last directed "Kill List," an indescribable mash-up of horror, crime and kitchen-sink English drama with a macabre sense of humor — even when one character's head is repeatedly pounded with a hammer. His latest, "Sightseers," is a bit nicer, in that it's an English camping comedy about a couple (Alice Lowe and Steve Oram) who occasionally murder strangers for no reason.

"I think they were worried I was going to make 'Kill List 2,'" Wheatley says of the project, which existed before he came aboard. He has a history in comedy, on television and online.

"I know how to structure a gag. Comedy's like a flame that you have to feed with fuel. If it dies it's very hard to get back. After the hammer scene in 'Kill List,' I thought no one would ever laugh again."

Doing a film with less head trauma — although there is some — was a relief after making what he describes as "a really horrible horror film," at least in the sense of its increasing bleakness. "I made that film and it made people really unhappy. I thought it would be nice if they came out having a laugh and were cheered by something I made," he says. "It's not the happiest comedy, 'Sightseers' — but it's a step in the right direction."

"Sightseers" goes back and forth between comedy — both Lowe and Oram, who wrote the script together, have a deep history in British comedy — and horrible gore, as when one pesky rambler's face

Quoted

"It's not the happiest comedy, 'Sightseers' — but it's a step in the right direction."

Ben Wheatley

is smashed in. "It's got a lot in common with [Paul] Verhoeven, and 'Python' stuff," he says. "[Terry] Gilliam does that often, going from stuff that's really horrible to stuff that's funny and satirical, then back to horror. You feel like you're being pulled and pushed around. I like that feeling."

Wheatley also offers up a theory that comics can, sometimes at least, make better dramatic actors than serious thespians. "The difference between a comedian and an actor is a comedian has the life experience of stand-up comedy. They've died in front of audiences a lot. They know what sadness is — for f—ing real. And it's their own material they've died with. That is more personal than being in a play that's s—."

Wheatley's view on humanity:

"I think people are funny, generally. Everyone has a sense of humor. They certainly have a sense of humor when things are going wrong. When you make films that are very po-faced, where no one has a laugh, they don't seem real. People aren't like that. People aren't stern and miserablist all the time."

LUCY KNISLEY

In her deliciously illustrated memoir, Lucy Knisley draws (and draws upon) key episodes in her life through food and recipes.

‘RELISH: MY LIFE IN THE KITCHEN’ IS EASY TO DEVOUR

For Lucy Knisley, the decision to create an illustrated memoir was easy. “Food is something that interests me, and comics are how I tell my stories, so it was a natural decision to make comics about food,” she says about the impetus for her new memoir, “Relish: My Life in the Kitchen,” a hybrid kitchen how-to and memoir. Here’s how she cooked it up.

Each chapter ends with an illustrated recipe; how did you pick these recipes?

The recipes are simple and familiar to me, and pertain to the chapter previous. I wanted to share some of my favorites, and allow readers to think about food abstractly, through the stories and then, more directly, through the recipes.

Which is your favorite food to draw? Which is the most challenging?

Favorite food to draw is probably the croissant — they're such fun shapes, and I've had a lot of practice with drawing them. My least favorite is probably the kind of food that might taste delicious, but look like brown goo — like curry or stew. It's hard to get across what it is through drawing, and that can be frustrating.

Is there some food you just can't do?

Can't eat or can't draw? I think I could draw any food! I had the opportunity in Korea not long ago to try eating live octopus. It's a little dangerous, as the octopus can choke you on the way down if you don't fully chew it up first — and while I eat meat, I just couldn't chew up a live creature in my mouth, especially one so cute. Pass.

When did you realize that food was something to cherish rather than fear?

I've never feared food — always loved it. It's something inherent in my upbringing, to love and to be curious about food. There's a lot to fear nowadays, of course, but it's important to remember that food is a shared human experience and can open us up to new experiences that connect us with one another, which is not to be feared.

A change of Hart

Blues. Beth Hart has been down and out, but she's ready to watch her career go "Bang Bang Boom Boom."

What may be most moving about the footage of Beth Hart performing at the Kennedy Honors concert in December, is watching the members of her audience realize what a powerful moment they're witnessing. Hart nonchalantly walks out onto the stage to join guitarist Jeff Beck to sing "I'd Rather Go Blind," a song made famous by the late Etta James. The segment is to honor blues great Buddy Guy, who is transfixed from the first note Hart sings. Later in the song, the camera pans to the Obamas, who are deep in reverent head-nodding that transcends any possible polite pretending for the camera. And when she finishes, the members of Led Zeppelin are among the first to their feet for a standing ovation.

Beth Hart plays at the City Winery on Thursday.

"I remember I sat myself down and I was like, 'Don't miss enjoying this amazing experience that's coming your way by being nervous. Just focus and do your gig,'" recalls Hart, who had been releasing records for more than 15 years before she took the stage that night

Hart says she didn't actually watch the performance until she was home for the holidays with her family.

"To have my mother watch that and see that — she's just like the center of my life — it was really something else, definitely the highlight of my life," says Hart.

Clean in the US

Dancing barefoot

Hart is enjoying a renaissance with her latest album, "Bang Bang Boom Boom," as she tours the U.S. for the first time in a decade. Drugs nearly derailed her career in the '90s.

"This is my first time being clean for the United States and I'm just having a ball," she says, joyfully, before adding one of the few memories from her darker days. "I was playing at a venue where Patti Smith was playing and I'm just the most hugest Patti Smith fan and we walk in and as we cross the floor I go, 'Oh my God. I remember coming out here in my bathing suit and taking a shower with a hose!' ... It kind of bummed me out. Then I thought, 'You've grown a lot. ... Move on.'"

3 National parks to visit

When Yellowstone became our first national park in 1872, it was a uniquely American idea. Ever since, we've had a deep and abiding affection for them. Here are our picks for three to see this year.

DEB HOPEWELL FOR FODORS

Volcanoes National Park, Hawaii

Where else can you see the ground in front of your eyes, as molten lava destroys everything in its path, only to create new land as it reaches the ocean? Last month marked the fifth anniversary of the eruption within Kilauea volcano's Halema'uma'u crater, which blasted open a hole about 115 feet wide. Now that hole is nearly 520 by 700 feet — and growing.

Mesa Verde, Colo.

The pull of this park is its enduring mystery: Why did roughly 5,000 Anasazi simply disappear — eight centuries ago — from the cliffs and mesas that had been their home for more than 700 years? They left behind a large network of cliff dwellings, irrigation networks and artifacts that offer a fascinating glimpse into a society that inexplicably vanished.

Must-see

Pinnacles, Calif.

Pinnacles is the newest national park (it had been a national monument), added in January. It's a popular destination for rock climbers and hikers, due to its many rocky spires and crags, but it's also home to more than 30 endangered California condors. And the chances of spotting one of these impressive birds — whose wingspans are nearly 10 feet — are very good.

Adventures in Turkey's Mediterranean region

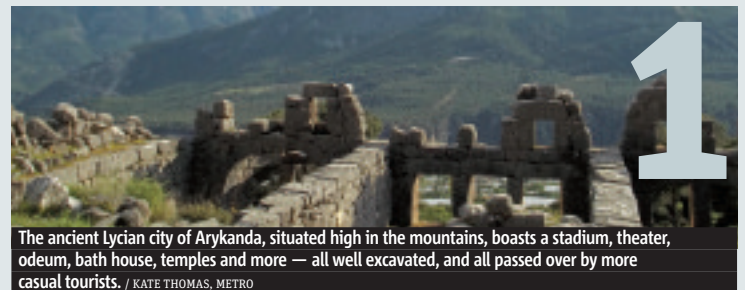

Bordered by the sea on one side and the towering Tauros mountains on the other, this region in southwest Turkey is perfect for adventurers of all stripes.

Make sure to pack your hiking boots, swimsuit, appetite and boundless curiosity, because there ain't no mountain high enough or valley low enough to keep an adventurer from finding an ancient civilization — or a delicious restaurant — in Turkey. And for those who like a little creature comfort, seaside resorts, mountain refuges and luxurious hotels are never very far away.

Arykanda

This ancient Lycian aerie, built on five terraces, is a well-excavated example of everything an ancient city should be. It's also a little out of the way, making it the perfect place to avoid the maddening crowds and take a good look at history — and a haunting, mist-laden panoramic view — on your own terms.

Teen texting at the wheel tied to more driving risks

Study. The more frequently students reported texting and driving, the more likely they were to also answer "yes" to other risky behaviors.

Teenagers who text while driving are also more likely to engage in other risky activities, such as riding with an intoxicated driver or not wearing a seatbelt, a new study suggests.

Researchers from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found four in every nine high school students had sent or received texts while driving in the past month. "Considering it's against the law for teens to be texting while driving in 45 states, it's a little concerning," said Emily Olsen, a health statistician in the CDC's Division of Adolescent and School Health and the report's lead author.

Past studies conducted in single states have found anywhere from one quarter to almost three quarters of teenagers text while driving, the study team wrote yesterday in Pediatrics.

To get a more nationally representative picture, Olsen and her colleagues analyzed responses to the CDC's annual youth risk survey. On the 2011 survey, conducted in public and private schools across the country, 8,505 high school students ages 16 and older were asked about potentially dangerous driving behaviors they had engaged in over the past month.

Just under 45 percent had texted while driving at least once during that span, and close to 12 percent of teens said they texted behind the wheel every day. The more frequently students reported texting and driving, the more likely they were to also answer "yes" to other risky behaviors, the researchers found.

"It's concerning that kids are participating in these multiple behaviors, either while they're driving or while they're a passenger," Olsen told Reuters. "Each one of these things is quite dangerous [on its own]." REUTERS

Talk to your kids

Olsen said that parents have the best chance of being able to curb unsafe activities in the car by continuing to talk with their children about safe driving even after they have their license. Teens, she pointed out, are already more likely to get into — and have trouble getting out of — dangerous situations on the road, due to their inexperience.

- "Anything that takes their attention away from the task of driving, it can wait," she said. Parents who are worried about their teens' driving behavior should reach out to their pediatrician or a school counselor, experts advised, as that risk-taking might reflect other underlying problems.

JIM GAFFIGAN

"Being a parent is incompatible with just about everything, if you want to do it right," says the comic and father of five.

PARENTING IS FUNNY

As a nationally touring comic, Jim Gaffigan is no stranger to hectic schedules and sleepless nights. His new book "Dad is Fat" is the newest addition to an extensive comedic career. In the book, Gaffigan applies his trademark self-effacing humor to observations about parenting. He'd like you to buy a copy so that his seven-member family can finally upsize from their jam-packed two-bedroom place in Manhattan.

How crazy is life with five kids under 8 in a two-bedroom?

It is insane. But everyone who lives in New York or a metropolitan area is sacrificing a lot of space. No one moves to New York because they can get more space. But I like convenience too much! I can put my kids to bed, and 10 minutes later be onstage somewhere.

What was your thought process while writing the book?

I wanted this book to be observational and substantive. And I focused it on hopefully being funny. As far as parenting goes, I have no idea what I'm doing! This is not an advice book, a confessional or a complaint.

Have your kids seen your comedy?

It's a very strange occupation to attempt to explain to a kid. As a comedian, you also have an additional parenting crisis — you have to teach kids to be polite, and not be joking around all the time.

Parenting so many little kids seems incompatible with the lifestyle of a stand-up comedian.

Being a parent is incompatible with just about everything, if you want to do it right. I intentionally didn't bring my kids up in my act for a couple years. I like my stand-up to be universal. On Twitter, I posted different comments I wouldn't say in my stand-up, and that led to the book.

How-to

Combining comedy and fatherhood

"Being a parent is incompatible with just about everything, if you want to do it right," says the comic when asked how he combines his career with fatherhood.

"There's something of a contrarian spirit in being a comedian that doesn't seem like it would prepare you to be a father. I intentionally didn't bring my kids up in my act for a couple years. I like my stand-up to be universal. On Twitter (@JimGaffigan) I posted different comments I wouldn't say in my stand-up, and that led to the book."

The shaggier, the better

At first glance, the beard is an international symbol of hipsterdom. But closer inspection reveals a lot of things. We look at five popular types and what they mean.

"I only realized what a phenomenon it was when I started working on my book '100 beards, 100 days,'" says the photographer Jonathan Daniel Pryce. "I stumbled upon this entire subculture that I knew nothing about." Yes, beards are in a boom period, and long may they reign. To celebrate this hairy moment, we check out the microtrends among the city's urban tribes.

1 The hipster

He's most likely to be found in areas like Williamsburg, N.Y., and Shoreditch, London, sporting a beard in an "ironic fashion" — too cool for trends. Look out for square-framed glasses, novelty necklaces and baseball caps.

2 The artist

He's got an overgrown beard from months of creative angst, teamed with a rolled tee, trilby and tattoos inked in by his arty pal. He's frequently found hanging out in "creative spaces" like warehouses and lofts.

3 The city professional

His beard will be as perfectly cut as his made-to-measure suit. There's nothing wild here. But his fashionable follicles do separate him from his shave-a-day corporate city friends.

4 The eccentric

He obviously works in the media — nobody else could get away with Rasputin's beard. The unkempt look takes hours of hair manipulation and the use of premium grooming products (but he'll never admit to it).

5 The fashionably preened

Ah, yes, the "fashion beard." It is perfectly groomed, trimmed and runway-ready. You're most likely to find this one on menswear editors and stylists, like our man Jeremy Langmead, editor of Mr Porter.

Don't forget to involve third party in your neighborly disputes

Re: "Noisy neighbors driving you crazy? How to deal" (Metro, May 13) Ms. Schneiderman neglects to mention that you might have to get the Human Relations Department involved if the harassment continues. They are required to interview both parties and resolve things. Also, you can get names in case you have to file a private criminal complaint. It can be hard to get renters' names. BARBARA TARVYDAS, VIA EMAIL

Catholic naming of saints is rife with hypocrisy

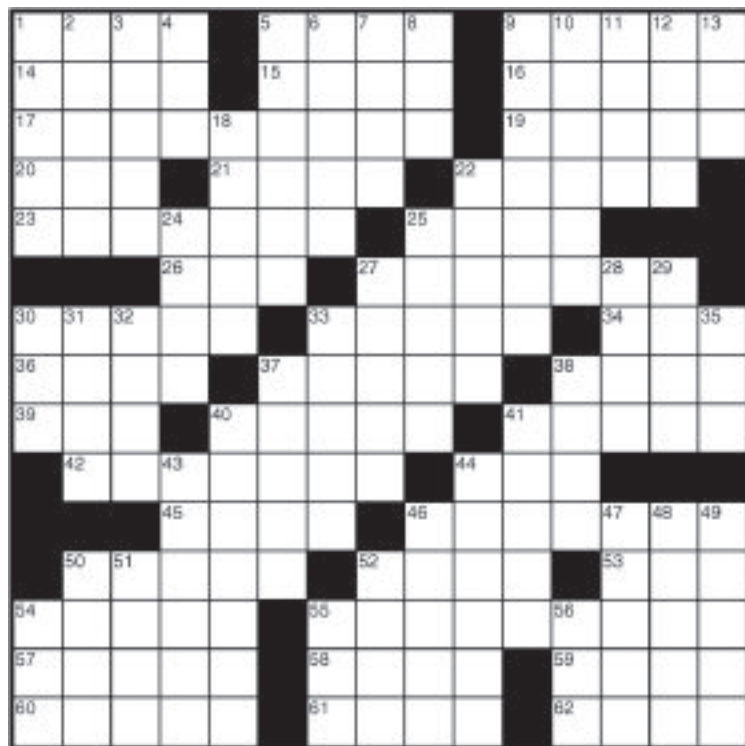

How nice that Pope Francis has elevated to sainthood hundreds of Catholics who were slain for refusing to convert to Islam. Now it would be nice, too, if he could do something in recognition of the vast thousands who were killed because they refused to convert to Catholicism.

Rangers rout Capitals in dominant Game 7

NHL playoffs. New York advanced to the second round with a near-perfect performance.

For the first time since the 1973 quarterfinals, the Rangers and Bruins will meet in the Stanley Cup playoffs as the Original Six brethren advanced to the Eastern Conference Semi-final with Game 7 wins last night.

In the ultimate win-or-go-home-for-the-summer game, the Rangers routed the Capitals, 5-0, last night at the Verizon Center.

Trailing in the series 3-2, the Rangers won Games 6 and 7. Last night's win was the first in the series for either team on the road. It was also the first Game 7 road win in franchise history.

Arron Asham's off-wing goal 13:19 into the match was the series winner.

Henrik Lundqvist stopped all 35 shots he faced to record his eighth career playoff shutout.

What went right

1 Everything — Well, it's true, just about everything went right for the Rangers in a totally dominant Game 7 victory.

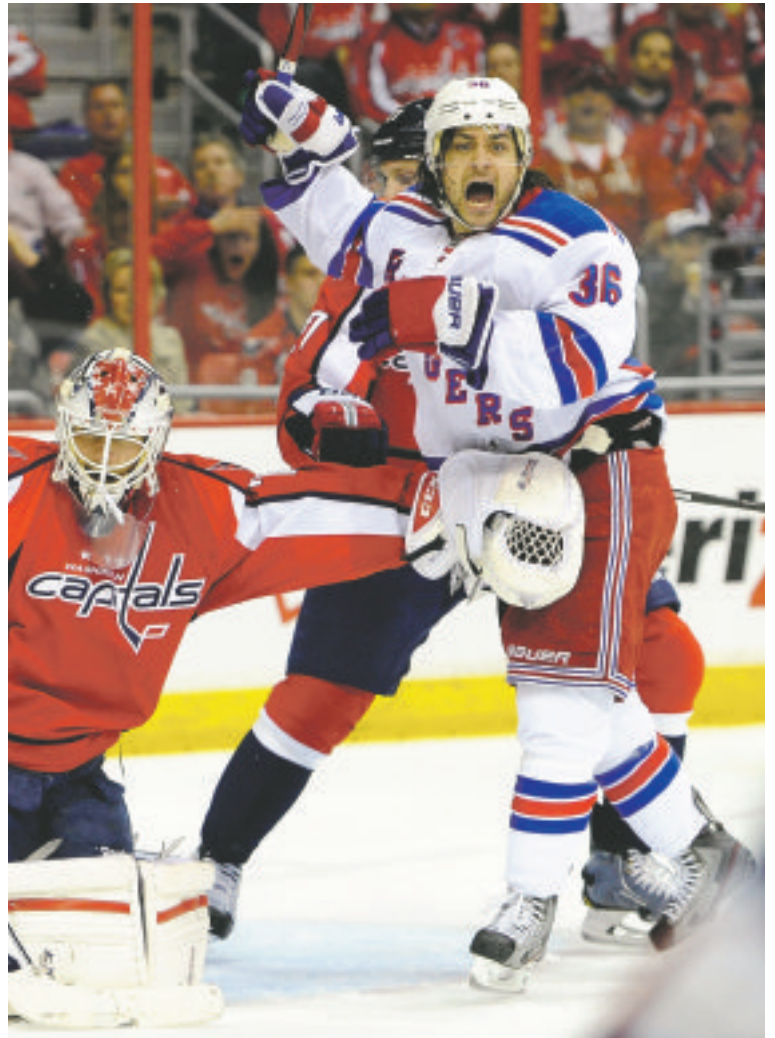

2 Unsung heroes — The stars didn't exactly come out in Game 7 as you'd expect. Sure, Lundqvist was perfect, but Arron Asham, Taylor Pyatt and Mats Zuccarello provided three of the four goals.

3 King Henrik — It wasn't more than a couple days ago people were saying Braden Holtby was better than Lundqvist. That is not true anymore.

Taylor Pyatt, Michael Del Zotto, Ryan Callahan and Mats Zuccarello also scored for the Rangers. Ten players recorded at least one point, led by Derick Brassard and Steve Eminger, who each had two assists. The plus-3 rating Del Zotto and Anton Stralman finished with led 16 players.

Boston defeated Toronto, 5-4, in overtime. Trailing 4-2 with 1:22 left in regulation, Milan Lucic and Patrice Bergeron potted back-to-back goals to force the extra session. Bergeron scored the series-deciding goal 6:05 into overtime.

NBA. Knicks center Chandler named to defensive first team

Tyson Chandler wasn't able to defend his Defensive Player of the Year crown, but oddly enough, he did accomplish something he didn't last season — a spot on the NBA All-Defensive First Team.

Chandler was named to the team today along with Tony Allen, Joakim Noah, Chris Paul, LeBron James and Serge Ibaka.

Fan favorite Charles Oakley was the last Knick to make the first team, back in 1994.

Knicks guard Iman Shumpert didn't make the second team, but did receive one vote. METRO

Knicks facing critical Game 4

The Knicks face what is essentially a do-or-die Game 4, down 2-1, tonight (7 p.m.) in Indiana.

"We've going to need everybody playing Tuesday night on all high cylinders, because we don't want to go back home down 3-1," head coach Mike Woodson said. METRO

MLB. Mets sign Rick Ankiel for outfield, starts immediately

The Mets could use pitching help, but Rick Ankiel will probably stick to the outfield.

The former pitching phenom and later outfielder for the Cardinals was signed by the Mets yesterday and immediately put in the lineup. He started in center field last night.

Ankiel signed with Houston this offseason, but was designated for assignment after 25 games. He batted .194, but did have five home runs, which would put him in a tie for third on the Mets. He hasn't batted over .260 since 2010.

He does provide solid defense for the team. Ankiel has one of the strongest arms in the league and covers ground well. METRO

Yankees send down Boesch

The Yankees demoted Brennan Boesch to Triple-A yesterday.

The move was done to add a pitcher, it could also end up making room for Curtis Granderson, who is returning from the DL. METRO

Yankees split twin-bill makeups with Indians

MLB. Masterson shuts out New York in opener before Yankee bats come through in Game 2.

It was a tale of two very different games in the Yankees' doubleheader against the Indians yesterday.

Former Red Sox pitcher Justin Masterson started the opener of the two weather-delayed games and shut the Yankees' lineup down in a 1-0 win. Masterson pitched his second shutout of the season, with nine strikeouts and four hits. The Indians scored on a solo homer by Jason Kipnis in the first inning off David Phelps and Masterson made it stand up for the next eight innings.

It was a different story

The Sandman

As part of Mariano Rivera's farewell tour, many teams are presenting him with city-related tokens.

- The Indians presented Rivera with one of the coolest so far — a gold record of "Enter Sandman" from the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

for the Yankees' offense in Game 2. New York led 1-0 after one inning and busted out for six more in the seventh as they won 7-0.

Vidal Nuno got the win in his first career start for the Yankees. He pitched five innings before yielding to Adam Warren, who went the rest of the game.
